Support Grows for Amending Animal Ordinance

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Last week advocates from the animal rescue community spoke publicly to the Commissioners of St. Mary's County in opposition to the recently updated and installed animal control ordinance, specifically the restriction of pet owners to five dogs before being required to get a kenneling license.

This week Commissioner Eric Colvin said he wanted to explore ways to amend the ordinance to address what he believed was the local government establishing a purely arbitrary number on dog ownership.

"The big concern is the five-dog limit," Colvin said during the July 30 business meeting in Leonardtown. "To me it seems to be that it's a little bit of government overreach. We put this arbitrary, five-dog number out there." Colvin said he has engaged the county attorney and county administrator in finding ways to "take away this arbitrary number and still meet the... intent of what we're trying to do, which is protect the animals and protect the people of the county."

Colvin said he believed the balance could be struck with relative ease in the ordinance with a few minor changes and was waiting for county staff to come up with a proposal to be debated later by commissioners.

Animal rescue advocates speaking last week at a public forum said the new ordinance would make it harder for them to take in and foster many puppies given up or abandoned by their breeders or previous owners and led to their eventual death or euthanasia.

To come into compliance with the county's newly updated ordinance, they said, would also be an unwelcome expense and make their efforts more difficult.

Federal Delegation Awards Funds to YMCA

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Maryland's 5th Congressional Representative Steny Hoyer, and its two Senators, Chris Van Hollen and Ben Cardin, all Democrats, awarded hundreds of thousands in federal funding to the YMCA project here in St. Mary's County last week.

The main chamber of the Commissioners of St. Mary's County in the Chesapeake Building was full July 26 with purple-t-shirt-clad supporters of the long-awaited project with about a $15 million price tag.

The project is being funded in part by the county commissioners and private donations and now with $850,000 from a congressional "earmark," or funds directed by elected officials to a specific project in their district.

While the practice has been widely criticized in some political circles as "pork barrel" spending, Hoyer defended the practice, saying it allowed a representative to get funding for a worthy project that might be overlooked otherwise.

"We're trying to help a little bit and I'm glad we could do that," Hoyer told those assembled.

Sen. Ben Cardin, who is not seeking reelection, praised the community members who have for several years continually pressed leaders for an agreement with the YMCA of the Chesapeake to run a new facility on Great Mills Road in Lexington Park.

"Thank you for sticking with it," Cardin said. "Now we're actually going to make it happen."

The YMCA has been seen an opportunity to provide activities and services to the underserved population and to the economically disadvantaged from physical fitness and well-being to jobs and skills training.

"This is about bringing community together," said Van Hollen. "It opens the door for young people and for their families."

"We think this is a good use of federal tax dollars."

Commissioner Mike Hewitt, who has been one of the most ardent local supporters among elected leaders for the project, said a YMCA was long overdue as a needful catalyst for revitalization of Lexington Park.

"It needs regeneration," Hewitt said of the county's oldest urban center. "The YMCA is part of that."

Robbie Gill, CEO of the YMCA of the Chesapeake which has agreed to run the facility, which will still be owned by the county, reiterated that the non-profit is inclusive of all in spite of their ability to pay for a membership.

"The Y[MCA] turns no one away due to financial limitations," Gill said.

Sheriff's Office Prepares for National Night Out

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Deputies with the sheriff's office are getting ready to meet with their community members when celebrations for National Night Out begin Aug. 6 countywide, said Sheriff Steve Hall this week.

Hall said the National Night Out celebration, which began decades ago as a way for law enforcement and first responders to bond with communities who wanted to stand up to crime in their neighborhoods, is one of the most important events of the year for his agency.

"It's been well over 30 years now [since the sheriff's office first took part] and it's amazing it's still going on," Hall told The County Times. "It's one of the best things we do."

By getting sheriff's deputies out in the community in a friendly, non-confrontational manner, where they can enjoy each other's company, said Hall, both sides can learn to understand each other better and learn to cooperate to fight and prevent crime.

This was especially important for newer, younger deputies who have recently joined the agency, the sheriff said.

"I don't know that there's a more profound crime prevention program that we do," Hall said. "We need to have that galvanized relationship with the community."

Hall said that the agency first began participating in National Night Out around 1991 and in that one particular instance, the inaugural celebration, that a unique phenomenon occurred.

"There was one call for service the first year we did National Night Out and that was a noise complaint which came because of a National Night Out event," Hall said.

To have such a reduction in calls for service, and presumably criminal activity, for even a brief period of time, was something he hoped could be replicated.

Hall said he plans to attend events in the northern, middle and southern regions of the county.

"I'll be all over," said Hall.

New St. Clements Island Water Taxi Approved

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

The local group of activists and volunteers that works to preserve historic St. Clements Island — the St. Clements Hundred — will get a new water taxi soon to aid in that mission after the Commissioners of St. Mary's County approved using $700,000 in state bond money to have the vessel custom built.

County planning documents show the vessel would have a 40-person capacity and be compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). The vessel would be used for transporting grounds and landscape equipment to the island by the St. Clements Hundred staff and volunteers, transport participants of all, varying abilities to and from the island during county museum division-sponsored events and provide transportation on and off the island in the event of a weather emergency.

Mike Hutson, a member of the St. Clements Hundred, said the boat would be "catamaran-style with a center cavity and a pilot house in the back."

"It would be much like a landing barge," Hutson told county commissioners at their July 30 business meeting. "It will be 45-to-50 feet long."

"It's going to be brand new."

The vessel would also be serviced by a boat lift to keep it out of the water when not in use for ease of maintenance and lengthened service life, Hutson said.

The vessel will also be designed entirely in Maryland by a builder based in Annapolis; Cerny Yacht Design, Hutson said.

In addition to the $700,000 in acquisition costs for the vessel, the annual operations costs, according to county project documents, would be $59,000 to be divided between storage at Colton's Point Marina, pay for the boat's captain, fuel, maintenance and insurance.

There are plans to develop a memorandum of understanding that would allow county emergency personnel to operate the vessel for transport in hazardous situations when sheltering in place on the small island is not feasible.

Tri-County Council Briefed on Alternate Regional Agricultural Center Plan

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Momentum seems to be shifting in the effort to build a regional agricultural center (RAC) in St. Mary's, with some elected leaders favoring a new approach that includes using a vacant grocery store still under lease in Charlotte Hall instead of building an entirely new facility as originally planned on county-owned land near a convenience center.

At a special meeting of the executive board of the Tri-County Council of Southern Maryland last week, staff presented a proposed business plan for how the alternate RAC, which would be known as the Southern Maryland Food Processing Center, would operate.

The space under consideration is the old McKay's/Shoppers Food Warehouse located on Mohawk Drive just next to the border with Charles County; the move to this alternative site is a result of about six years of delays for the original project.

Under the original agreement with the Southern Maryland Agricultural Development Commission (SMADC) the facility was to be used to process already slaughtered livestock for eventual sale by local farmers, plus the sale of some value-added farm products.

Under the new proposal, the facility would be used to process meats, poultry, seafood, produce and other cottage industry-made foods, said Craig Sewell, marketing and livestock program manager for SMADC, and support 20 full-time employees.

"It could accomplish a lot," Sewell said of the proposed pre-built site.

Costs have also increased over time, Sewell said, for the original RAC proposal.

According to his presentation: "The last estimate for building the RAC from the RAC design group was near $7 million.

"And that was before the changes requested by the St. Mary's [County] Health Department in the 10-month delay to get septic approved."

Del. Todd Morgan (R-Dist. 29C), who attended the meeting on July 25 virtually, voiced his displeasure with how long the process has taken and now with the proposal to switch to a new, pre-built site.

"I don't like power grabs," Morgan said during the meeting.

Morgan later clarified that he feared that SMADC would want to take over the operation of the RAC in its new form, but saddle St. Mary's County taxpayers with the majority of the bill.

The memorandum of understanding on the project states that the facility, whatever it may be, must be owned by the county.

Sewell himself said in the meeting that SMADC could not sublease the property, which is currently still being leased by Shoppers Food Warehouse despite ceasing operations there.

The county, Sewell said, would have to own the property or in conjunction with other members of SMADC, which includes Calvert, Charles, Anne Arundel and Prince George's counties.

The county and SMADC should not move so quickly to abandon all of the work put into building the original site, Morgan said, who noted only Charles County has so far shown an interest in helping with the cost of owning and operating the pre-built site on Mohawk Drive.

"If it's that important, let's see everyone else put some skin in the game," Morgan said. "The burden shouldn't be placed solely on St. Mary's County tax payers."

Historic St. Mary's Mansion, Grounds Up for Sale

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

An historic nearly 500-acre plantation nestled away on the banks of the Potomac River in Leonardtown has been up for sale for almost a year now with an asking price of $30 million.

Not widely known because it has always been held in private ownership over the centuries — yes, centuries — Mulberry Fields is still owned by the Jansson family, which first took possession of it about 70 years ago.

Built in 1763, Mulberry Fields has survived the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812 and the Civil War as well as efforts by developers to reshape its land and character. It still stands today.

Holger and Mary Jansson, long since passed away and having left the mansion and the grounds, much of it split between agricultural land and pristine forest, to their children, became well known in the community for their philanthropy and advocacy for preserving historical resources like Mulberry Fields.

They opened their home in the mid-1970s to archaeologists eager to study a remaining example of Georgian-style home architecture and a prime example of the gentrified, agrarian lifestyle of the mid-18th century in St. Mary's County.

One of those young archaeologists was Henry Miller, now a Ph. D and Maryland Heritage Scholar at Historic St. Mary's City.

He was a little saddened at the prospect of such a cultural and historic resource passing out of the hands of the Jansson family who had long held it in trust.

"Holger and Mary did so much to protect it," Miller told The County Times. "Everything [in the interior of the mansion] is original from the 1760's.

"I would hope whoever acquires it would respect the building; it's the best Georgian-style mansion in St. Mary's County.

"It's a fabulous building."

According to a prospectus of the property the last major additions were made to the manor house in 1832.

The plantation was also once home to dozens of slaves who worked the grounds there until the Civil War.

"The Maryland Historical Trust documents that William Somerville [one of the owners] held a slave labor force of about 46 men, women, and children by the early 1800s," the prospectus reads. "Most worked in the fields, cultivating corn, wheat, flax, and cotton."

There are numerous other structures on the property surrounding the manor house, with some of them rented out as living space. One such building is an art studio.

There are conditions on the sale and use of the property.

"The Maryland Historical Trust Deed of Easement allows industrial or commercial activities to be conducted at Mulberry Fields if the external appearances of its buildings are not altered," the prospectus reads as one of the conditions. "Owners of Mulberry Fields must abide by a conservation easement, a historical preservation easement, and three road easements.

"Approximately 100 acres of the land is currently leased out for farming purposes. Approximately 300 acres of the land is forest."

Miller said his first visit to Mulberry Fields left a lasting impression on him.

"It was the first 18th century mansion I ever encountered in my life," Miller said. "I was thrilled... you could feel the history."

Holger and Mary Jansson had many other interests in St. Mary's County but they all focused on maintaining and preserving the unique ways of life here.

Holger and his son Gordon were both artists who helped found the North End Gallery which still operates in downtown Leonardtown. The Janssons were also influential in starting the summer concert series at St. Mary's College of Maryland, and starting the Potomac River Association.

The concert series began life in the mid-1980s as the Tidewater Music Festival and was held at Mulberry Fields.

The family was also instrumental in using their influence to stop an oil refinery from being built approximately 50 years ago in Piney Point.

Starting in 1968 Holger served as the director of the Historic St. Mary's City Commission as well.

Miller said he was glad to have been able to call the Janssons his friends.

"They wanted to share the building [the Mulberry Fields mansion] with others," Miller said. "They recognized its significance and character.

"The Janssons were so generous."

Miller held out hopes that Mulberry Fields would stay much the way it had for the past generations.

"I hope whoever acquires it respects the integrity of Mulberry Fields and what a remarkable historical asset it is for St. Mary's County and Maryland," Miller said. "It's like being in another world when you go there.

"It takes you back to the agrarian world of the 18th and 19th century."

Mulberry Fields was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1973.

20 Businesses Pass Compliance Checks

On July 24, 2024, the St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office Alcohol Enforcement Unit conducted several alcohol compliance checks within St. Mary's County.

The covert compliance checks involved using an underage Sheriff's Office Confidential Informant, hereafter referred to as CI. The CI was 19 years old and was accompanied by Sergeant Robbert Merritt, both of whom were dressed in athletic wear. The CI was directed to enter the store and request or retrieve an alcoholic beverage from the business location to purchase it.

Twenty alcohol retailers were visited, and 19 were compliant with Maryland law. However, one retail business failed to ask the CI for any identification, and the CI was able to purchase an alcoholic beverage illegally.

The following businesses asked for identification from the underage individual:

Traffic Stop Leads to Arrest and Recovery of Stolen Firearm

On Sunday, July 28, 2024, while conducting proactive traffic enforcement in Lexington Park, Deputy Joseph Senatore initiated a traffic stop on a Ford F-150 for an equipment violation. Upon approaching the vehicle, Deputy Senatore observed a firearm in plain sight, leaning against the passenger's left leg on the front passenger side of the truck.

The driver and the passenger were detained, and the truck was searched. The firearm was identified as a loaded 7.62 X 39mm Draco pistol with ammunition chambered. A subsequent check of law enforcement databases revealed the weapon was listed as stolen through the Shenandoah County Sheriff's Office in Virginia.

The passenger of the vehicle, a 17-year-old juvenile, was arrested and charged as an adult with transporting a handgun in a vehicle, a loaded handgun in a vehicle, possession of a stolen regulated firearm, possession of a firearm by a minor, and related charges.

The suspect was transported to the Detention and Rehabilitation Center in Leonardtown to await a bond hearing.

Hollywood Man Charged with Multiple Counts of Assault

On Thursday, July 25, 2024, Patrol Deputies from the St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office responded to a call from a business owner for the report of a suspicious incident that had occurred Wednesday, July 24, 2024, at approximately 9:45 p.m. in the parking lot of an establishment located in the 25000 block of Point Lookout Road in Leonardtown, MD.

Deputies spoke to the victims, who were employees of the business. They were advised that on Wednesday, as they were leaving work following their shifts, a coworker drove past, rolled down his vehicle window, and pointed a firearm at them.

In speaking with the business owner and the victims, Deputies were able to identify the suspect as Carl James Zimmerman, 19, of Hollywood, Maryland.

Zimmerman was located at his residence and arrested without incident. The weapon, a "bullpup" style 12-gauge shotgun that was legally registered to Zimmerman, was recovered. The suspect was transported to the Detention and Rehabilitation Center in

Carl James Zimmerman

Leonardtown and charged with four counts of first-degree assault and four counts of second-degree assault.

Those with additional information about this incident are asked to contact Deputy Mina Geric at Mina.Geric@stmaryscountymd.gov or 301-475-4200, ext. 8166.

Letters to the Editor

'Enthusiastic support' for two candidates

The SMC Times letter to the editor of 7/18/24, by Phillip Wentz, criticized the highly qualified At-Large SMC school board candidate Brandie Edelen as being "immature and unprofessional" in her reaction to the SMC teachers' union's vote against endorsing her candidacy. Edelen's response included criticism of the union for "causing rot in the school system" and "not caring about the students."

Among evidence of the union's negative impact (rot) are its long record of support of permissive policies that endanger safety of classroom schoolteachers and their students. And their continuing opposition to health screening kids for drugs to protect them from harmful drug use and related violence.

Such endangerment of teachers and students in the current fearful violent public education environment, is well-documented in periodic behavioral student surveys. It is a major cause of continuing loss of student enrollment headcount and the difficulties of teacher recruitment.

The younger candidate, Josh Guy may be less experienced. But from his excellent closeup witness as a recent teacher in the SMC schools, he has provided important documentation quantifying the "rot," as in his previous LTE of 6/20/24, titled, "Our students deserve safe schools." In it he cited official statistics revealing that hundreds of SMC students were arrested or suspended for violent attacks on unprotected students and teachers in a single school year. He also advocated use of legal and effective "Alternative Schools" to isolate dangerous offenders from their terrorized student and teacher victims.

Therefore, while I enthusiastically continue my support for the more experienced and highly qualified Brandie Edelen for service on the SMC school board, I likewise enthusiastically support the continuing candidacy of Josh Guy whose well documented advocacy accentuates the urgency of the need for our government and school officials to enact new and effective initiatives -immediately- to begin in the new approaching school year, to authorize and implement "zero tolerance" of violence against students and teachers.

'Unconcerned with even the appearance of fairness'

On July 12, 2024, the Education Association of St. Mary's County (EASMC) announced its endorsement of candidates for election to the St. Mary's County Board of Education.

The endorsement process consists of a candidates' questionnaire and a video interview for the consideration of its members. Of note is that I was not offered the opportunity to participate. I did not receive the questionnaire or an invitation to be interviewed. Was I politically stonewalled. Why?

Based on its history of endorsements, I am aware of the EASMC's predilection of support for Democrats. I am also aware of my opponent, Cathy Allen, being registered Democrat. I surmise the EASMC's endorsements are politically motivated.

According to Maryland Code, Election

Law § 8-802, (a)(1)(i), "Members of boards of education shall be elected on a nonpartisan basis." School board candidates file certificates of candidacy "without party designation or regard to party affiliation," and are designated as "unaffiliated" on election ballots. Essentially, by the letter of the law, this is the extent of "non-partisan" school board elections.

As demonstrated by the EASMC, the non-partisan nature of school board elections is a pretense. In general, there is no adherence to even the spirit of the law. The EASMC was unconcerned to show even the appearance of fairness.

Drive Safely Around Horses and Buggies

Did you know that St. Mary's County is home to an Amish community of approximately 350 families? In honor of Amish Safety Day on August 1st, St. Mary's County Government (SMCG) reminds residents to slow down and be courteous when driving near Amish horses and buggies. Many people do not expect to see Amish buggies on the road, and they are not as visible as cars, trucks, and bicycles. These factors make them more vulnerable when on public roads. Accidents between a car and buggy can be serious and have often led to severe injury or death.

Chaptico and Mechanicsville are the primary areas of residence for the Amish community in St. Mary's County, Maryland. Highways which serve as major arteries for Amish horses and buggies are Thompson Corner Road (Maryland Route 236) and Budds Creek Road (Maryland Route 234). Amish buggies may also be seen on other St. Mary's County roads, including Point Lookout Road (Maryland Route 5) and near the St. Mary's and Charles County line.

Here are some tips for how to travel safely around Amish horses and buggies:

Take it slow in areas where there is a high prevalence of Amish. The average horse and buggy only travels 15-20 miles per hour.

Give them room by passing in the other lane whenever possible. Allow 20 feet between your vehicle and the horse before returning to the travel lane.

Do NOT use the horn or make any unexpected or loud noises. Horses can be easily spooked, especially by loud noises such as a car horn, revving engine, noisy exhaust pipes, or squealing brakes. This can cause a safety hazard for the Amish horse and buggy operator, as well as the vehicle operator.

Do not stop to take photos. While horses and buggies can be very interesting, it can be dangerous for the horse and the operator if you stop nearby for a photo-op, especially if stopping in front of or next to the horse.

Observe driving habits. A horse and buggy is not the same as a motorized vehicle, and therefore will not behave as one. Buggies will drive as close to the right side of the road as possible but may move toward the center when making a turn. Most buggies do have turn signals.

Leave plenty of room between your vehicle and the back of the buggy when stopped at an intersection. A buggy may roll back slightly once stopped, or a horse may take a few steps backward. This could cause damage to the front of your vehicle if you are stopped too close.

Be alert for horses at night. Most buggies utilize flashers during the day and night, but the horses may be harder to see at night.

Stop the car if the driver signals the horse is spooked and wait as long as reasonable and necessary until the horse is calm enough to safely pass.

The '70s Still 'Colour My World'

I say loudly, in the voice of Jan Brady, of The Brady Bunch, "Laundry, laundry, laundry!" I know, it has to be done, and often, especially married to a pool man. Sometimes though I wish that the cycles were about 10 minutes each instead of 59 minutes or more each, because, I'll say it, "I forget the load in the washer and dryer all the time" while I start on other things or run errands, etc. I am sure I put that dryer on fluff more than I should, even with the buzzer turned on high. I'm normally upstairs, or outside, or in my workshop, so I don't know why I bother to turn the dryer buzzer on anyway. I may hear it now since I'm in the office upstairs, however the laundry room is below our bedroom on the opposite side of the house. Maybe I should start setting my cell phone alarm when I put in a load. Also, why don't split foyers have the laundry room upstairs where the bedrooms are?

Right now, I'm in that awful, in between cortisone shots time, where I can look at the laundry basket and think that should really go downstairs, or look at the furniture and think, "Wow, that really should be dusted" and then I realize that, oh, my subconscious is saying, "That means you dummy!". Actually, I can hear Fred Sanford add, "That means you, you Big dummy!". I really must be stuck in the 70s, not that that's a bad thing, since I still love all the music, colors, and memories. Weren't shag rugs so soft? And wasn't it nice without all the distracting technology of cell phones and social media. You could lay on that shag rug with your head in the middle of two large speakers listening to your 45s or your albums and nothing would disturb you other than your mother calling you down for dinner. Or sit and read a book outside under a tree with no interruptions. Those truly were my most favorite things in the world as a child through the teenaged years. It was still the same for me in college when I brought my 70s albums, receiver and large speakers to our tiny dorm room in 1979 as you can see in the photo – all that was missing was a fluffy shag rug to lay on.

My husband and I love to sit out front either in our firepit area or in front of his man-cave old Mustang garage and listen to the 70s music stations on TV through Breezeline's Music Choice. I love all the 70s rock including heavy metal and once in a while my husband will listen to a little bit of that for my sake, though we both love soft rock and classic rock which is a happy medium for us. We can sit companionably for hours, not saying a whole lot, each lost in our old memories of where we were when we first heard a song. Some nights, we talk the whole time about our memories, whether it be concerts we have seen together or earlier in our lives, or about trivia associated with each artist or band. The talkative nights are normally the nights with a glass or so of wine, or a tumbler of Bourbon: My husband enjoys a bit of Bourbon over a large cube for sipping, and I've found in the last few years that I love Kentucky Mules, Old Fashioneds, or even better, smoked Old Fashioneds.

Well, I don't know how I got from laundry to Bourbon. It may be due to an author asking in one of my cozy book clubs today on Facebook (yes, a wonderful distraction), "Readers, how about you? Which sleuth are you most like?" to which I replied, "I'm more like Miss Marple. I take the long, convoluted method of explaining things, or getting my thoughts out by word or on paper...but I eventually arrive at the answer." This is just the way my mind works. Could my mind be this way from all those distractions I have availed myself of in the last 26 years since my first cell phone and my first clunky computer a few years later? Or is it just the start of remembering older stored memories more than the thousands of images we see and hear through TV or scrolling each day? I panic most every day that I have not written something down on the call log that has come in on our business line, or on my cell phone, which could be by phone call, text, Facebook Messenger, or by email. Then there are appointments and events and birthdays...and on and on that we all have to keep track of on our "can't live without" phone calendars, although I still use my trusty little 4" x 6" purse sized notebook for back up. The world does seem to be spinning faster. I think I'll turn up the old Chicago song of Colour My World with the beautiful waltz tempo which has been playing softly in the background on repeat, and just maybe I can slow my own world down just for today.

To each new day's adventure, Shelby

FINANCIAL FOCUS®

Are you afraid of outliving your money?

Do you worry about running out of money during your retirement years? If so, how can you help prevent this from happening?

In the first place, if you have this type of fear, you're far from alone. Consider this: 58% of retirement savers from all age groups, including current retirees, say that outliving their assets is their greatest retirement fear, according to a study by Cerulli Associates, a financial services research organization.

This type of fear can certainly affect your quality of life when you retire. Still, there's no need to panic – because you can take steps to help prevent the running-out-of-money scenario. Here are a few to consider:

- Know how much you'll need during retirement. You need to get a clear picture, or at least as good an estimate as possible, of how much money you'll need to support your retirement lifestyle. Once you do retire, some costs, such as transportation or other work-related expenses, might go down, while others – medical expenses, in particular – will likely go up. The fear of running out of money, like many fears, is caused largely by what you don't know, so having a good sense of how much you'll need in retirement can help reduce your anxieties.
- Build financial resources before retirement. You're probably at your peak earning capacity in the years close to your retirement, so consider contributing as much as you can afford to your IRA and 401(k) or other employer-sponsored retirement plan.
- Maximize your Social Security payments. You can start collecting Social Security as early as 62, but your monthly benefits will be larger if you can afford to wait until your full retirement age, between 66 and 67. (Payments will "max out" at age 70.)
- Re-enter the workforce. Going back to work in some capacity is one way to possibly help build retirement resources and delay taking Social Security. If you have a particular area of expertise, and you enjoyed the work you did, you might be able to go back to it on a part-time basis or do some consulting. You could boost your cash flow, and potentially extend your contributions to an IRA and to an employer's retirement plan.
- Cut costs during retirement. Possibly the biggest cost-cutting measure is downsizing – are you willing and able to move to a less expensive area or scale down your current living space? Of course, this is an emotional decision, as well as a financial one, and downsizing isn't for everyone, but it might be something to at least consider. As for the lesser ways of reducing expenses, take advantage of senior discounts, which are offered in many areas, including entertainment, public transportation, restaurants and retail establishments. And look for other opportunities, such as cutting out streaming services you don't use.
- Look for more income from your investments. As you get closer to retirement, and even when you do retire, you might want to adjust your investment portfolio to provide you with more income-producing opportunities. However, even as a retiree, you'll want some growth potential in your investments to help keep you ahead of inflation.

Ultimately, the more you can bolster your financial security before and during retirement, the less fear you may have of outliving your money.

Doug was taken from us 5 LONG years ago, people say it gets easier, I say it gets harder...
Praying and music are what keeps me going.
Many songs remind me of Doug,
my favorites are: Carry on Wayward Son by Kansas, Comfortably Numb by Pink Floyd, and Nothing Else Matters by Metallica, those song titles say a lot...
I am going to end with Doug's original memorial, just make it bigger, just like his heart was...

Steve Wilcoxson, 74

Stephen Earl Wilcoxson, 74, died June 27 at York Hospital after a long series of illnesses. Born June 17, 1950, in Fredericksburg, Virginia, Steve was the son of the late Earl and Harriet Wilcoxson. He graduated from Great Mills High School, where he played football and was bitten by the theater bug. He enlisted in the Navy and served in Vietnam.

In the '70s, he acted in several south central Pennsylvania community theaters and worked on outdoor dramas like "Wings of the Morning" in St. Mary's City, MD as technical director. He also co-founded a sandwich shop in New Orleans in the famed Maple Leaf pub.

In the early '80s, Steve took a variety of jobs, from deep-sea diving for oil companies to staging then-new IMAX technology for the Canadian Pavilion at the New Orleans Worlds' Fair. He met his beloved wife Vicki in the early '80s, and they married in 1985 at St. Charles Avenue Christian Church. As Vicki earned multiple degrees in nursing, Steve graduated from Davenport College in Michigan with Paramedic certification.

During the '90s, Steve and Vicki lived in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, Steve as paramedic and bodyguard to the royal family, Vicki as hospital nurse who wasn't permitted to drive. When Steve and Vicki decided to return to the States, he was presented an award for serving as Disaster Coordinator to the King Fahad National Guard Hospital, chief of the Hospital Disaster Preparedness Response team. He also earned certifications from the Professional Association of Diving Instructors (PADI), diving the Red Sea from Jordan and the Caribbean from Jamaica.

Steve and Vicki moved to Shippensburg, and he launched Gettysburg Stage, a troupe dedicated to performing mature, literary plays. They made their debut with "You Can't Take It With You" in 2000, produced by the Adams County Arts Council. The company presented thought-provoking plays through 2003.

Steve was already struggling with health issues when the couple moved to Florida. He'd faced serious medical problems for the last 25 years of his life, weathering each new challenge with gratitude to be alive and with Vicki at his side. But they missed friends and connections in Pennsylvania. They moved back to Waynesboro, where Vicki continues to serve as Cardiac Nurse Practitioner.

Steve is survived by wife Vicki, stepson Zachary Pfeiffer (Angelique Carson) of Washington D.C., sister Harriet Beck (Lewis) of Connecticut, niece Jennifer Soltanas, nephew David Beck, and two great-nieces, Cailyn Soltanas and Briana Beck plus cousins.

A Celebration of Life will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday, September 28 in the Gettysburg GAR building, 53 E. Middle Street, Gettysburg. There will be refreshments and displays of Steve's remarkable life. Kingston Court (York) retired chaplain Helen Pinder will present remarks and invite friends to tell stories and reminisce about Steve.

Norma Redden, 90

Norma Ann Redden was born November 19, 1933, and raised in Washington DC. This was four years after the stock Market crash in 1929. The family was poor just like everyone else in the nation. During this dire time in history, most families did not have modern conveniences. I believe Norma lived her life no different later in years. She did not waste or overspend unless she desired it. She always thought of someone else before herself. She was also a big tipper for services rendered. She knew about hard work. Her entire life was always trying to help someone. Family was always first. Norma had tragedies but has always said "She Was Blessed". She lost her father when she was nine years old in 1942. I believe Norma regarded life as precious and always kept close to the family. Her brothers William, Buck, and Mo along with her sister Doris were always very close. They never moved far away from each other.

Norma got married at 17 to her husband Bill October 2, 1951. Together they had two children, Debbie in 1954 and Sam in 1958. Family and friends were always around for holidays and special parties. Norma evolved into the main cog in the family. Always helping when needed in some form or another. Norma and Bill cared for her mother Florence (Grandma to everyone) since 1968. Norma always provided for her mom, whether it be rides to bingo, special trips, or just a quiet place to live. They moved to Forestville, Maryland to buy their first home in 1966.

They raised their children in Catholic Schools and stressed education as the single most important thing. Catholic principles were also important to Norma. She prayed every night before bed.

She started work at 17 with the C & P Telephone Company as an operator. Her sister Doris and mother Florence also worked at the same job. The only time she didn't work was to have her two children. Her work effort was superior. She always felt she wasn't smart due to her lack of education. However, Norma retired with 33 years of service with the phone company. She was a lifetime member of The Telephone Pioneers of America and proud union member of the Communication Workers of America Local 2108.

Norma lost her husband, Bill on July 13, 1981, who died of a sudden aneurism of the brain. She was devastated but was the strongest woman you will ever know. Her faith in God pushed her through tough times. Norma still felt blessed for the time they had; just shy of thirty years.

After a few years, Norma started to volunteer at the VFW and American Legion to get out of the house and as usual help people. She kept in close contact with a few of the older generation of family. When someone was sick, she was always there for support. She was a member of the Cooties, dressing up as clowns and visiting old age homes and children functions.

Norma again met a special person in her life, Carl Hoffman. Norma knew Carl from work and the VFW. Norma called Carl to set him up with a friend named Jeanette. Carl thought Norma was asking him out. It turned out be a great relationship. He was the most softest, caring person for her. A true gentleman in every sense of the word. They travelled everywhere and she, again, said she was blessed to have two loving people in her life.

During this time, tragedy struck again when Norma's mother Florence was killed in a car accident Feb 25, 1989. Norma was also hurt with several operations and physical therapy.

Norma was always positive about bad things happening. She dealt with the pain and continued living life to its fullest. She spent time with grandchildren and great grandchildren at every event of their lives.

Norma and Carl moved from Forestville, MD to St. George Island in 1998. They travelled all over the world on trips with the local clubs. Visiting friends of Norma and Carl were always special to both of them. Norma always bragged about trips to Lewes, Delaware to see Carl's friend Jack Flaherty. Carl was a huge Redskin fan and baseball fan as well. Norma followed the games but didn't really have a favorite team. She would just cheer for the team you wanted to win. She also loved to dance and could cut a mean rug in her day. Music was always being played at the house when she was cleaning or decorating for the holiday parties. Christmas always took place at the Redden house. Family and friends as usual.

Tragedy struck again when Carl passed November 10, 2010. They had been together 25 years.

Again, Norma was devastated, but kept her faith in God. Norma lived the last 14 years alone on the Island. She volunteered at the St. George Island Improvement Association for several years. She loved the people and the island with all her heart. She didn't want to miss the sunrise on the water. She had too many friends to list and was loved by everyone. She lived life to the fullest. She has been to the depth of the water scuba diving, skiing in the mountains, numerous cruises, Cancun trips with the family, sporting events, and also loved watching her great grandchildren performing in sports and theater. In her words, "live life to the fullest and don't let the man get ya". She will be missed by all.

The family will be doing a graveside service on August 12, 2024 at 1:00 pm at the Maryland Veterans Cemetery, 11301 Crain Highway, Cheltenham, MD 20623.

Norma is survived by her children Deborah Jean Windsor of St. Leonard, MD and Clayton William Redden (Sandra) of Hernando, FL; and her brother Charles "Moe" Roland Moroney (Rita) of Clinton, MD; her grandchildren Ronda Libby, Russell Windsor (Samantha), Robert "Clay" Windsor (Michelle), Ryan Redden (Brittney) and Dana Ruhe (Jeremy) and great grandchildren: Austin Libby (Morgan), Garrett Libby (Elizabeth), Lilly Windsor, Aaron Windsor, Wyatt Libby, Shane Windsor, Abby Windsor and Roman Redden and her Great-Great Grandchild, Harper Libby and many extended family and friends. In addition to her parents, she is also preceded in death by her husband Clayton Willard Redden, her sister Doris Virginia Moore and her brothers, William "Bill" Webb Moroney and Franklin "Buck" Moroney.

Serving as pallbearers will be Austin Libby, Garrett Libby, Aaron Windsor, Wyatt Libby, Shane Windsor and Roman Redden.

Letters to the Editor

Oppose Lusby Villas

Lusby Villas is the wrong time for this development. Thus, I strongly oppose this project for the following reasons:

1. The Lusby Town Center does not need additional traffic. Rousby Hall Road, where this project will front, is overburdened with traffic now, and there is dangerously scarce accommodation for pedestrian and bike traffic. The Lusby Town Center Master Plan that addresses traffic, bicycle lanes, and public safety was adopted and approved in 2002, but it has not been updated since. A major development bringing more people and more traffic to the Lusby Town Center should not be approved until a new traffic study is completed and the Town Center Master Plan is updated.
2. Lusby Villas will impact impervious surfaces that feed into waterways and eventually into the Patuxent River. The subdivisions of Chesapeake Ranch Estates and Drum Point are densely populated with many septic systems now failing. This project will only add to the pollution of the waterways and environment.
3. Crime is a concern in the first district where the Lusby Town Center and this project is purposed. Pick up a weekly copy of the Calvert County Times and read the Police Blotter. More people equal more crime. With respect to Planning Commission Chairman, John Toohey, who stated it was a good project because it would provide affordable housing, I would like to know what his definition of affordable housing is and how he would guarantee Lusby Villas would provide the affordable housing he envisions. The tax records indicate this property is owned and would be developed by Lusby Town Center, LLC. This is the same group that developed Lusby Center Shopping Center, and in January 2005, submitted a Memorandum of Understanding to the Planning Commission. The memorandum stated, "The owner shall deliver a deed conveying fee simple title to the Village Green Area containing approximately two acres of ground, more or less." Do residents remember the 'It is Your Lusby' signs that subsequently showed up in the Lusby area? Beautiful drawings were submitted showing a gazebo that would host concerts and other civic events; the walkways and landscape were picture perfect. Yet, what did the residents of Lusby get? An enormous mound of dirt and the surrounding area that is overgrown with weeds.

It is not in anyone's best interest to approve this project without further evaluation and thoughtful planning. Many citizens have spoken out in opposition to the development of Lusby Villas. It is county government and the Planning Commission's obligation to serve the citizens' wishes. Presently, this project cannot assure affordable housing, but without question, will cause traffic congestion, increased crime, and reduction of safety on Rousby Hall Road.

Law Enforcement, Community Come Together for National Night Out

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

Across the country and in Calvert County the annual National Night Out (NNO) takes place this year on Tuesday, August 6.

According to the NNO website, "National Night Out is an annual community-building campaign that promotes police-community partnerships and neighborhood camaraderie to make our neighborhoods safer, more caring places to live. National Night Out enhances the relationship between neighbors and law enforcement while bringing back a true sense of community. Furthermore, it provides a great opportunity to bring police and neighbors together under positive circumstances."

Calvert County Sheriff Ricky Cox said of the benefit of NNO to law enforcement, "It benefits us well. I wish we could do more of it, because it seems like we only do it one day a year in August. For me moving forward, I would like to do it more than once a year. That's what I'm looking forward to doing. It gives the opportunity just to have that partnership that I hope it grows between us and sheriff's office. Also, we get to interact with local fire departments, our paid EMS, and our volunteers too, because they come out in the communities with us too as well, which is kind of cool because we work well together here in our community. And, it just bolsters that kind of relationships that we have between us and the fire service as well."

He added, "What we're looking for, too, is for partnerships in the neighborhood. We're also looking to make our community stronger and safer as a whole. And, it gets the citizens here to know their deputies. And, since I've been elected as sheriff, I've started the neighborhood deputy program. So, I think right now we have 14 to 15 different communities inside our county that I assigned a deputy to. And that deputy hears all the concerns. And a lot of them got invited to their Easter community parties, summer parties. So it's kind of cool to see it actually working in place."

While a deputy at NNO, Cox said, "I liked to see the smiling faces on the kids because they look up to us. I interacted a lot with the kids out there. We played basketball, we had corn hole set up in a lot of them."

In the Calvert NNO communities, attendees will enjoy visits from law enforcement, local Fire and EMS, and various community agencies. It's a great chance to meet your neighbors, make new friends, and have some fun.

Lusby Villas Memorandum of Understanding Questioned

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

The proposed 276-unit Lusby Villas apartment complex continues to be a hot button issue. The 2005 Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) between the planning commission and the property owner, which is the underpinning of the rights alleged by the developer, was called into question by two speakers at the public forum at the county commissioners' July 30 meeting. The planning commission is scheduled to take their final vote on the project at their August meeting.

Myra Gowans, founder of Calvert Citizens United (CCU) addressed the commissioners about the "legislative and legal oversight for the county that you all are using or perhaps not using, but maybe you don't even know what's going on, that's a possibility."

She said she received a timeline from planning and zoning on Lusby Villas including the 2005 MOU and the 2020 project submittal. She asserted, "I look up the memorandum of understanding, and this is questionable. First of all, you've got a document that's dated the 26th day of January 2005. The Planning Commission signed this document. I don't even think they had legal authority to do that. It's usually the county attorneys that do this for a memorandum of understanding," adding, "On the back page has it signed in 2005 by all the planning commission members, Johnny Gott (the property owner) signs the document in 2004 in January. What does that tell us? What does that say? That says that this document is altered, has been altered, or there's a missing document. Now, nobody in their right mind would do a document like this without notaries. There're no notaries on this, no notarizing of the signatures. You also have this document that everybody is relying on for the development of the property."

She added, "This document that was signed, that was agreed to, this document is the whole document that everybody's referring to, this memorandum of understanding, which is questionable because Johnny Gott's signature is at another time and place. Now, the other thing is that you have to worry about here is Johnny Gott is referred to as the owner. Johnny Gott signs this as the managing member; what the heck is a managing member? That could be a secretary."

Gowans said, "You have a false document here, and everybody's putting all their eggs into this basket. Now the other thing is in this document says 'time is of the essence.' What does this mean in legal terms? It means it's critical. This is a critical issue. You must work to get this handled and done immediately. You must quickly and efficiently and with haste do this project. In 2005, adding 'If you don't do it when time is of the essence, you're in breach of your agreement. This is a problem, and it has to be addressed and it has to be looked at."

Myra Gowans

Josh Johnson, chair of the Calvert County Republican Central Committee, noted the traffic study, which is now being revised, doesn't meet state and local requirements. "All this is normally done by the way before it even passes the first time around."

He added, "I've been listening to people. I've had a lot of people come up to me and they're concerned. They do not want this."

Johnson said, "We already have a thousand more units. I do appreciate what Commissioner Ireland was saying (see separate story) about trying to be able to have some housing for those that might need it. Keep in mind, we already have 8,000 to 9,000 affordable housing units here and we have another thousand that are already proposed.

"So, another thing to keep in mind, there's different values for different people. Some people want to have paths and they want to walk on that. I think that would be great in some areas, but keep in mind our values are not necessarily that way. And the values of the people that came out to all these town halls that might not be their values. They appreciate what they have. They appreciate keeping this area rural, and that really needs to be the values of what we have because that's what they're telling us and that's the reason why they got us selected."

Sentence Imposed for Child Pornography

Hunter Lee Kirby, 27, of Prince Frederick, was sentenced on July 26 to 35 years in prison, with 10 years of active time, for distribution of child pornography and sex abuse of a minor. The sentence was imposed by Judge Andrew S. Rappaport of the Calvert County Circuit Court.

In July, 2023, the Maryland Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force received a cyber tip that Kirby was accessing and sharing child pornography on his electronic devices. The court issued a search warrant that led to the seizure of these devices. Multiple images of child pornography were identified and Kirby was arrested. Further investigation revealed that Kirby had unlawfully touched a minor female.

Upon his release from prison, Kirby will be on 5 years of supervised probation. He will also be required to register as a sex offender for life.

Mayor Candidate Reacts to Current Mayor's Criticism

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

Former Chesapeake Beach mayor and current mayoral candidate Bruce Wahl has reacted to criticism of him by current Mayor Pat Mahoney.

Mahoney said at the July 18 town council meeting, "Thirty-six years ago, in 1988, Bruce Wall was appointed by Mayor Gerald Donovan to the town council. Bruce was loyal to that administration for his entire time in office." Donovan, who has since passed away, was operator of the Chesapeake Beach Resort and Spa and the Rod 'N Reel Restaurant, which has gaming machines and sports betting. The facility is now operated by his family.

"To be clear to the world, you will not see a Bruce Wahl sign in my front yard. This is not the same town it was in 1988. Probably, you know, close to a large percentage of our registered voters weren't even born in 1988. Our citizens expect more and deserve better now," Mahoney said.

Wahl responded, "There are three establishments in the town that have gaming that's authorized by the state. I personally am not a person that does any gaming. I don't, it is just not what I do. But I also believe that these businesses operate legitimately, they support the community. They contribute, if I'm not mistaken, somewhere near 25 percent of the tax revenue of the town. So, I don't see it as evil. I don't participate in it, but I believe in live and let live, if this is legal, it's authorized in the state. I don't see any reason to attack those businesses. And candidly, they contribute a lot to the community. I think the Rod 'N Reel has about 230 employees, a lot of whom live in the town.

"I think the Traders has over a hundred, many of them live in the town. So, it's providing revenue to the town. It's providing employment for the citizens. It's providing nice places to go. And, when you walk into these establishments, you don't have to do the gaming, that's a choice. And so, I don't have a problem with it. Mahoney has had a problem with it, and he always has the entire time he has been on the council. I don't know what the root of that is."

Wahl feels the waterpark should be kept open and refurbished. He said, "The water park is a huge issue. Last year they rose the rates so high. My wife has always had a season pass at the waterpark. We paid for that every year. And last year, they did away with the middle tier, which was the county residents. So, all they had was town residents and everybody else. They raised the rate so high, the place was deserted. And then at the end of the season, they complain that they lost hundreds of thousands of dollars. Well, is any of this a surprise? No. It seems like it was deliberate, and that was the excuse to shut it down."

Wahl said the waterpark should be for residents and visitors alike.

He said he was originally appointed to the council by Donovan because of his experience with waterparks in Virginia. He said, "Originally the concept was we were just going to build a swimming pool. And this was back in the 80's."

He added, "I came up with this swimming pool concept, and Mayor Donovan said it needs to be more entertaining than that. Why don't we build a waterpark? So, we changed it from just a plain swimming pool to a waterpark, and it ran successfully for years and years and years."

Wahl observed, "This thing about the waterpark sinking was the excuse for shutting it down. The entire waterpark is built on hundreds of pilings that are driven down to bedrock," adding, "If it's sinking, the whole earth is sinking."

"To completely shut it down, keep everybody away, and not have a plan to repair, I think they're spending tens of thousands of dollars for consultants to figure out what to do, which I don't know that that makes a whole lot of sense. The waterpark needs to be reopened so we give our high school kids summer employment. So, we have places to keep my wife entertained and everybody else."

Wahl said, "Mahoney's comment that got captured at a work session about, we don't want that people down here. I don't know exactly what he was referring to, but I can kind of figure out what he might've been referring to."

Wahl said he hadn't been in good health since leaving the mayor's office but has lost 150 pounds and had a heart transplant. He said, "My health is better now than it's been in probably the last 30 years."

He said after he retired from National Public Radio in 2019, "I hadn't paid a whole lot of attention to what had been going on in the town until earlier this year. And when I started digging into it, I was pretty appalled at a lot of the things that I see are going on. And so, after a lot of careful thought and a lot of prayer, to be quite honest with you, and lengthy conversations with my wife Becky, I decided to go ahead and run again."

"I think that I bring back to the town council a sense of civility, although if you attend the current meetings or observe the current meetings, there doesn't seem to be much dissension among the council. When I was mayor, there was a faction led by Pat Mahoney that basically would oppose everything that I did. If I had said, the sun's gonna come up in the east and go down in the west, they would've said, no, nope. We're gonna have it come up in the west and go down in the east. That's how bad it was."

Meanwhile one of the other candidates for mayor, Councilman Greg Morris, has reportedly withdrawn and will instead seek to be re-elected to the council. Morris did not return The County Times' call for comment. Councilwoman Valerie Beaudin is the other announced candidate.

Planned Unit Developments Rejected

Commissioners Vote Against 3-2

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

The Calvert County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC), on a 3-2 vote, has decided to keep the prohibition of planned unit developments in place in the county. Commissioner President Buddy Hance cast the tie-breaking vote during a July 30 meeting at which the update of the zoning ordinance was finalized for a second draft expected later this month in advance of a scheduled Nov. 10 public hearing.

Zoning planner Wil Hager explained, “A plan unit development is a mixed-use development that must combine residential with a combination of recreational, commercial, or institutional elements. The goal of a PUD is to achieve a substantially higher quality development that provides a public benefit that would otherwise not be obtained. And a key factor with a PUD is that a PUD proposal requires Board of County Commissioners approval.”

Director of Planning and Zoning Mary Beth Cook said of the public benefit, “It really could be up to the applicant, whatever they want to include with their proposal. It could range anywhere from anything really. A library, a community center, something that would typically not be included in a normal application that comes into the office for review. It’s an addition, kind of like a give and take, if we’re requesting that, if you give us some leniency or some flexibility that we don’t have to adhere to these regulations and we can do this instead.”

County Attorney John Norris explained that the PUD was contract zoning, “It’s a proposal from the developer that does go through a public hearing process before the planning commission. Under the state law, the Planning Commission then makes a recommendation to the Board of County Commissioners. One, whether it’s consistent with your comprehensive plan and any of your town center master plans that might be applicable. And also makes a recommendation as to whether or not the Board of County Commissioners should approve it. And then that goes to a public hearing before the Board of County Commissioners, because it is actually creating what is a mini zoning ordinance that just applies to that piece of property.”

Commissioner Mike Hart led the charge against PUDs. He said, “It sounds like it makes the county code irrelevant. If there’s a project and there’s something county code dictates must happen, it gives the board the authority to say that that ordinance no longer applies if they’re satisfied with the offer from the builder.”

Hart used as an example two people who want to open a restaurant. He said, “We have parking restrictions on how many parking spots per tables. Solomons is the only one that does this shared thing. But restaurant A’s got a lot of money and he’s got a great relationship with board members. And he says, Hey, I’ll build you something over here if you relax your parking regulation. Person B doesn’t have that kind of money and he can’t buy you something over here. So, person A can build his restaurant or person B cannot because he’s got nothing to offer.”

He added, “It seems to me he’s buying his way for a more relaxed code. And to me that sets a table for a whole lot of corruption. And it sets a table for people that prey on you when you’re new. They come out because they know you don’t know. You haven’t been through the ringer yet.”

Hart said he experienced such a situation with a person who had contributed to his campaign and then expected special zoning favors.

Hart observed, “Big corporations are able to go in and do this same exact thing where a small business owner cannot because they can barely afford to do what they’re doing. But they have a fair business as well. They’re providing the service as well.”

Commissioner Catherine Grasso was equally as opposed to the PUDs. “I believe that the table should be fair for everybody. And the rules are the same. I am adamantly against these PUDs because they rely on the credibility of who sits in these seats. And I think it just puts too much power on these seats and not enough on the public out there. And staff. I think it puts pressure on staff to come up with ways.”

Cook said contract zoning was allowed. She noted, “This is a successful planning tool that’s used across the country. And I really think the desire is to get a more attractive product.”

Norris said a nearby example of a PUD was Wildewood in St. Mary’s County.

Commissioner Mark Cox said, “So, in my opinion I think it’s a valuable tool to put in a toolbox. And I’ll give you an example of that. Let’s go back to Armory Square. I believe we had...four or five text amendments we did with the first group. If we had a PUD, we would not have been there. And if we had a PUD with the second group, we could have navigated the citizens’ wants and needs through town halls and we could get their opinions and we can navigate with the developer early on and not at a late stage of what they want, what the citizens want in the development.”

Commissioner Todd Ireland said, “Senior housing...is definitely a need here in the county as is start-up housing. How many parents have kids in the county who can’t afford to live here? Kids are moving from here to DC to apartments because they’re more affordable, because they’re walkable communities, much like our comprehensive plan spells out being vibrant walking communities, which we don’t have here.”

That left Hance as the swing vote, and he said he had mixed emotions. But in the end he concluded, “I’ve been struggling with this for a while, as most of you can probably tell. And, I’m going to have to be a No because I am concerned that it does make it easier for three commissioners to make changes, even though I know they can without it (the PUDs).
