Public Input Sought for St. Mary's 2050 Plan

Second Survey Results Released

By Dick Myers Staff Writer

County officials are continuing to encourage community participation in the long-range planning process dubbed "St. Mary's 2050: Charting Our Tomorrow."

The project consultant and county staff just completed an extensive outreach blitz in which they attended a number of events in May and June in which they solicited participation in surveys to supplement one that was offered online. Results of those surveys were presented to the planning commission on July 28 and the county commissioners on July 29.

Responses were received from more than 1,300 residents, but that only represents slightly more than one percent of the county's 115,000 population. County officials would like to do better.

Consultant Leigh Anne King, director of Clarion Associates, said two percent is considered to be a good response for a long-range plan. King and Director of Land Use and Growth Management Jessica Andritz made the presentations to the two boards.

In an interview with The County Times, Andritz said, "The reason why we sought money from the commissioners was so we could get a firm with nationwide experience in helping local jurisdictions develop future plans, whether it's the comprehensive plan or an infrastructure facilities plan, all kinds of things."

She added, "I think what we heard about asking people to provide feedback about the future, particularly as we're projecting out, sometimes it's hard relative to a document like that."

But the plans do have an impact on citizens even if they don't readily see it. "It absolutely does," Andritz said, "But it may not impact them immediately. When you're thinking about a comprehensive plan, by and large you're thinking about it, 15 to 20 years out, even though the state requires the plan to be reviewed and updated every 10 years."

She noted, "I think that span of time could be difficult for the average person to really focus on and understand."

Andritz explained that a comprehensive plan is "the chief land use policy document for the county, guiding land decisions, whether we're talking about, targeted growth and development, or preservation and conservation and being a steward of our environmental resources. Through economic development programs, we want to see all businesses grow and thrive here in the county. So, this is the chief policy document that kind of lays the foundation framework for implementation, whether it's through comprehensive zoning ordinance, whether it's through the strategic plan, whether it's the transportation plan put together by the Department of Public Works and Transportation. It's the chief land use policy document that guides those types of decision for St. Mary's County."

She was asked if the plan determines what the county will look like. She said, "It doesn't go into that level of detail. It's not going to talk about what a specific neighborhood looks like. It's more general than that, more big picture, that it might tell you areas where there is infrastructure or where there needs to be infrastructure to support targeted growth and development. It's also going to identify certain areas around farms and areas along the water where you wouldn't necessarily want development, where the infrastructure, meaning water and sewer for example, aren't there."

She added, "The document has wide ranging implications, but it's not going to probably go into the detail of someone's neighborhood. That's something that you would typically find either at a master plan level, or at preliminary plan level when we're talking about creating a large-scale community, like some of the ones that are being developed."

So why should people be involved with long-range planning? Andritz responded, "To outline and share data with the commissioners. what residents want (the county) to look like, feel like, in 2050. Without the public input and engagement, t's very difficult for you, a handful of planning commission members, and a handful of elected commissioners, to make those decisions are best made with informed (input), by those who live and work here."

Andritz said the process is exciting for her staff. "It's a once in a lifetime opportunity. It's great to get out there and talk with people about it. But we will continue to get input as we move forward through the fall. We'll start working with the consultants and the project team that's been assembled to draft and review the draft. And the draft will be available this fall to certainly engage in and provide feedback. I'm hoping that the numbers will continue to grow."

During the presentation to the two public bodies, King reported. "The public review draft will be shared as part of Community Engagement Window Number Three. Call that the plan unveiling and that will give the community an opportunity, as well as the commissioners and planning commission, to provide comment and make revisions to that plan before we take it into the final phase, which is plan adoption, where we have the formal public hearing process, which would happen later this year, early into next year during the winter months."

During the presentations to the planning commission and the county commissioners, King presented results of the survey conducted in May and June. "There were three short surveys that were packaged as one survey that were provided at 15 in-person community engagement opportunities."

In the section of the survey called "Guarding Our Growth through 2050" respondents were asked, "Which areas of St. Mary's County that participants support mixed use development."

Responses were Lexington Park, Leonardtown, and California. King said, "Mixed use development is typically a development that will include a commercial component and a residential component."

King said, "Slightly less than a third said that they didn't support this type of development in any location. So that's notable."

The second question focused on identifying the areas of St. Mary's County in which participants support smaller starter homes and townhouses. Responses were in order of magnitude Lexington Park, Hollywood, California, followed by Mechanicsville, Charlotte Hall, and Callaway.

The next question focused on multi-family housing. A quarter of the respondents were not supportive.

There was a question about redevelopment. King said, "One thing that we know about most redevelopment situations is that to make it economically feasible, typically the owner, the developer of that property has to build it at a more intensive level to make the investment in the redevelopment feasible."

In that scenario, 46 percent of respondents supported it, and 19% percent didn't. The others were unsure.

A second section of the survey dealt with environmental and agricultural resources:

- Investing in natural storm water management
- Purchasing land to protect shoreline areas.
- Purchasing conservation easements.

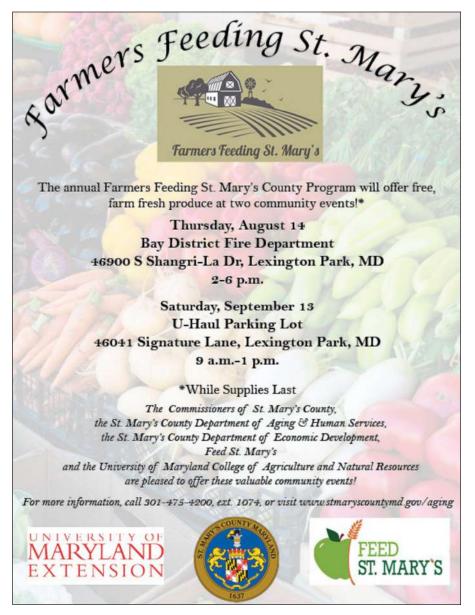

Only 17 percent were opposed to such actions.

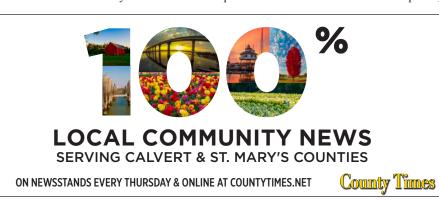

As to supporting purchasing land for water access, 54 percent said yes and only 13 percent said no.

As to the development of new agricultural support uses, such as small-scale meat processing and produce packing hubs and then lowering speed limits on frequently used rural roads, there was overwhelming support although less so for lowering the speed limits.

Community Spirit Shines at National Night Out

By Dick Myers Staff Writer

Neighborhoods across St. Mary's County lit up with laughter and community pride as residents gathered for the annual National Night Out celebration. From Charlotte Hall to Ridge families joined law enforcement, first responders, and elected officials for an evening of connection and camaraderie.

Hosted by the St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office, the event ran from 6 to 8 p.m., bringing together dozens of neighborhoods for block parties, cookouts, games, and meetand-greets with public safety personnel

Sheriff Steve Hall told The County Times, "National Night Out is a great reminder that public safety is a shared effort. When our community comes together like this—neighbors meeting deputies, conversations happening on front lawns—it builds real trust. That connection between our blue and our community is what keeps St. Mary's strong."

Deputies, Maryland State Police troopers, local fire departments, and rescue squads made their rounds, engaging with residents and sharing safety tips. Participating neighborhoods included Lexington Village, Golden Beach, Hollywood Shores, Myrtle Point, Wildewood and Leonard's Grant, among many others.

The Sheriff's Office encouraged residents to register their events in advance, and the turnout reflected the county's strong commitment to community engagement. "When neighbors know each other, we're all safer," said Alisa Casas, Public Information Officer for the Sheriff's Office.

New Policy Would Address Student Debt

By Dick Myers Staff Writer

The St. Mary's County Board of Education is considering a new policy that deals with student debt. Currently parents or guardians of students owe the school system hundreds of thousands of dollars in unpaid fees and changes.

Chief Operating Officer Michael Watson told the school board at a July 30 work session, "Since COVID, we've implemented, obviously, one-to-one technology for almost all of our students...and with that has come some increases in not only just technology debt, but other debt as well across the school system. So, we were talking about some situations where we could look at our internal processes, and kind of capitalize on some of our existing policies."

So, staff have developed a proposed policy, and a committee has been formed to develop procedures to implement those policies. The new policy will have its first reading at the Aug. 13 school board meeting and a public hearing on Aug. 27.

Watson said, "This policy is intended to promote transparency, fairness, and support for all students while maintaining fiscal responsibility.'

The policy statement says, "The purpose of this policy is to establish clear guidelines and procedures regarding student related debts that occurred within the school system. The goal is to promote responsible financial management, ensure equitable treatment of all students, and clarify the board's position on the collection and management of school related debts. "

The policy says, "The school system recognizes that students may incur debts related to school activities, including but not limited to meal accounts, lost or damaged technology, lost or damaged school property fees associated with extracurricular activities, library fund, fines, and other approved charges.'

It goes on to say, "The school system shall communicate clearly with students and parents or guardians about any owed debts, including the amount owed, the reason for the debt and the procedures for payment or resolution."

It adds, "Efforts may be made to assist students and families in resolving debts, including providing payment plans or alternative options, where feasible, to avoid undue hardship.

Board member Dorothy Andrews asked, "I know that when students go through the line...if they don't have any money or something, they can still have their food and there's no collection needed or anything. So do the meal accounts really need to be in there?"

Watson said, "The lunch cost is still the responsibility of the parent of the child. So, that child does build up a negative lunch account balance that is tracked. If a student or parent fills out the proper documentation and they are awarded, they would be considered for a free or reduced meal. So, we urge people to fill it out as much as possible. We send out a lot of communication on that."

School Superintendent Dr. J. Scott Smith said, "We've done a great deal as a state and as a county not to stigmatize or penalize a child. And we recognize how important it is that every child gets an appropriate lunch because if you're hungry, you're really going to struggle to concentrate in class.'

He added, "That being said, we're accumulating. We've got students who are accumulating a substantial amount of debt and, parents aren't necessarily being as responsive as they need to."

Andrews said, "I just wanted that cleared up more for the public to hear, that children are well taken care of.'

Board member Mary Washington said, "I want to thank the school system for efforts to remind the parents that is important to fill out the free and reduced lunch form. They may think they don't qualify, but once they fill it out, they may not qualify for a free lunch, but they may be able to qualify for a reducedprice meal. So, efforts need to be more aggressive in making sure that they need to fill this out at the beginning of the school year and.... when their economic condition changes. Maybe earlier they didn't qualify, but because of parent losing a job or sickness or whatever, they fill it out, they may possibly qualify, but they must fill out the form."

She added regarding the wording that efforts may made to assist students and families," "I think since you do it anyway, it should be 'efforts shall be made or will be made' because you do that anyway."

Smith agreed that the wording should be changed to "shall."

Watson said, "When you have a student whose laptop is broken or unintentionally damaged, that may be something that a principal would consider that as an option, working with that family as a fee waiver or something like that. Whereas a student then purposefully breaks that or uses a TikTok challenge where they stick a paper clip or a pencil into the port and it damages the whole laptop, then that would be a situation again that that the principal of that school may consider it differently."

The policy allows the right for extracurricular activities to be withheld in the case of debt arrears. But Washington said students shouldn't be penalized if their parents don't have the money.

During the course of the discussion, it was revealed that the accumulated unpaid debt included $135,000 in meals, more than $200,000 in technology equipment and $20,000 in library books.

Consultant Hired for School Redistricting

By Dick Myers Staff Writer

The St. Mary's County Board of Education has awarded the contract for the school system's redistricting study, formally known as the "Facility Utilization and School Boundary Consulting Contract."

According to Director of Capital Planning Kimberly Howe, the project includes "identifying, justifying and recommending school boundary recommendations for the most effective and efficient use of capital resources in a fiscally responsible manner, as well as remaining flexible to appropriately respond to conditions in our student population, facilities, and our community over time. This will result in the development of optimized use of our facilities to include potential closures and boundary realignment recommendations for our 27 schools that maximizes opportunities for student achievement and allows for the best delivery of instructional program within our available facility and financial resources."

The contract was awarded to Cannon Washington, a global consulting firm with an office in Arlington. Va. They have previously done work for the school system.

The awarded contract is $199,860, with a contingency of $48,045, bringing it just short of the $250,000 budgeted for the consultant.

Chief Operating Officer Michael Watson explained the proposed schedule for the contact work:

- July 2025–September 2025: Consultant evaluations of facility utilization and school boundary changes, including the potential school closures
- September 2025-October 2025: Internal evaluations with staff to finalize up to 3 scenarios
- October 2025-December 2025: Community engagements sessions throughout the county to receive feedback on proposed plans
- · January 2026: Final option report presented to committee and the Superintendent of Schools. Information presentation of the final option to the Board of Education.
- February 2026: Incorporate feedback from the Board of Education and conduct a public hearing
- March 2026: Final approval portion to the Board of Education and possibly the Commissioners of St. Mary's County
- April 2026: SMCPS notification of new assignments to parents

Of the consultant evaluations, he said, "We'll look at facilities. We'll look at boundaries. We'll look at population of schools and potential school closures, potential movements from schools to schools, depending on overpopulation in some of those areas.'

Of the public meetings, he said. "We anticipate that looking like presentations at all three high schools that would coordinate all of the feeder schools too that high school for those presentations."

Howe said, "Anyone is entitled to go to any one of those. If you want to go to all three, you would be able to do that.

Board member Dorothy Andrews wanted to know if future county's future growth would be considered. Howe said, "We have a lot of data that we have to provide them on our buildings, our growth patterns, our enrollment. They're going to take a deep dive into looking at our enrollment and our projections, and capacity and utilization of our buildings. What we have is the information that we can get from (the Office of) Land Use and Growth Management. In conjunction with that, there's also the comprehensive plan that is going on for the county. And we'll link them to that as well, because then they can see what is being said in the community about that as well.

Superintendent of Schools Dr. J. Scott Smith said, "I think this is going to be incredibly complex work. It's going to require us to have the sharpest of pencils and the most thoughtful of minds. But we cannot throw around we're going to close the school, we're going to close the school, we're going to close the school, we're going to close the school.

"St. Mary's County isn't like that. We don't throw away anything and we don't close things unless we absolutely know that it's the right thing to do, not only for students, but for parents in the communities that those schools serve.

"So, we have five smaller schools and all dickmyers@countytimes.net

Maria Gorodetskaya will be Cannon's client leader. She will be responsible completely for ensuring that the project happens.

small schools in the State of Maryland, with the way the Blueprint is written and funding flows, are always at a remarkable disadvantage. And so really what we're going to be doing is working with consultants and some of the very best minds to be able to demonstrate, perhaps all the way up to the state level, why things need to be considered, perhaps even with a greater amount of detail. I know that they talked about looking at some of the funding relative to small schools and figuring out a multiplying factor. We're going to have so much data to be able to drive that.

NAVAL AIR STATION PATUXENT RIVER

F/A-18 and EA-18G Surpass 12 Million Flight Hours

The U.S. Navy's F/A-18 and EA-18G aircraft fleet has surpassed 12 million flight hours, marking an important milestone for one of the most enduring families of aircraft in modern naval aviation. This achievement underscores the capability, reliability and availability of these aircraft, which have served as the backbone of the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps air power for decades.

Thursday, August 7, 2025

Put into perspective, the aircraft have completed the equivalent of 500,000 days, or nearly 1,370 years, of nonstop flight defending national interests and ensuring global security.

"When you call the roar of these aircraft 'the sound of freedom,' it holds real weight," said Capt. Michael Burks, program manager for the F/A-18 and EA-18G program office (PMA-265). "Throughout their service, the F/A-18 and EA-18G family has supported nearly every major U.S. military conflict of the past 40 years and continues to adapt to rapidly changing threat environments. From the initial deployment of the Hornet to the advanced capabilities of the Super Hornet and Growler, these aircraft have delivered forward presence, tactical airpower and critical electronic warfare capabilities around the globe."

Since the F/A-18 Hornet was first introduced in the 1980s, it has quickly become a versatile and capable fighter and attack aircraft. Its successor, the F/A-18E/F Super Hornet, and its electronic warfare counterpart, the EA-18G Growler, introduced significant advancements in radar, avionics, payload capacity and electronic attack.

Key modernization efforts include Super Hornet Service Life Modification (SLM), which extends Super Hornet service life from 6,000 to 10,000 flight hours, and the delivery of Block III Super Hornets, which are equipped with advanced sensors, enhanced survivability and a redesigned cockpit for improved pilot performance. Growler Block II modifications will enhance mission systems, enable future capability growth and strengthen the Navy's electronic warfare superiority.

This milestone is a significant achievement and a reflection of the generations of Sailors, Marines and civilians who sustain, fly and innovate these platforms every day," said Burks. "Twelve million flight hours demonstrates our commitment to delivering world-class capability, enabling our warfighters to execute their missions with an asymmetric advantage and return home safely."

The flight hour milestone comes at a notable time for naval aviation, coinciding with the 30th anniversary of the Super Hornet's first flight in November, and as the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps prepare to celebrate 250 years of service to the nation this year.

As part of Program Executive Office for Tactical Aircraft Programs (PEO(T)), PMA-265 supports, sustains and advances the F/A-18A-D Hornet, F/A-18E/F Super Hornet and EA-18G Growler, delivering critical capabilities to ensure naval aviators succeed in dynamic and contested operational environments.

Recently Retired Air Force Pilot Honored

By Dave Spigler Contributing Writer

During an evening dinner hosted by the Father Sebastian da Rose Knights of Columbus in Valley Lee, Lieutenant Colonel Brett Shilling was surprised with a special presentation from the Knights and the local Quilts of Valor group "Pax Sound of Freedom."

Brett served 21 years as an Air Force fighter pilot and had recently retired in Germany. He flew home with his family to spend a few days with his parents Chuck and Lori Shilling in Piney Point. His proud dad wanted to acknowledge his son's illustrious career and devotion to our country, so he had his Knight's Council put together a special evening. He secretly invited several family members and close friends to come together to celebrate Brett's service.

Colonel Shilling's story of patrolling the Russian border in his F-16 Viper aircraft was published in an October 2020 edition of the CountyTimes following a special report by NBC reporter Richard Engel on a morning TODAY Show.

An accomplished jet pilot, Brett received many service awards during his distinguished career including two Combat Air Medals. He earned the call sign "Tick" from his fellow squadron mates who described him as a "tick" for just like this pesky insect, when engaging in a war game "he gets on your back and refuses to let go."

Brett graduated from Oxon Hill Science and Tech High School in 1999 and was his Class Valedictorian He earned an appointment to the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, CO and achieved academic excellence and received orders to jet flight school upon graduation. During his illustrious 21 year flying career, he endured a significant amount of G Forces not often experienced by any jet pilot in any of our military services. At his retirement ceremony, his Commanding Officer awarded Brett with the Meritorious Service Award with four Oak Leaf Cluster for his many brilliant and distinctive accomplishments in the service of his country.

At the conclusion of dinner, friends Jim and Cele Clooney were invited to make another presentation to recognize Brett's many contributions during his years of military service. As members of the local Quilts of Valor Foundation "The Pax Sound of Freedom," the Cooneys are volunteers in this nationwide organization that prepare wonderful patriotic quilts to present to veterans upon their completion of service. Since 2003, thousands of service members and veteran recipients have been surprised with the presentation of these beautifully hand stitched quilts. This movement began when a mother had a dream of giving one to her son when he returned from Iraq. In her dream, her son's demeanor and utter despair changed once he was wrapped in a quilt. The first one was presented to a young soldier at Walter Reed Medical Center who lost his leg in Iraq. In the 22 years since, almost 500,000 of these comforting and healing quilts have been awarded. Brett was beaming as Jim and Cele wrapped him up in his quilt.

As a nation, we are fortunate to have many fine men and women such as Lt. Colonel Shilling standing guard in protecting our country. Thank you, Shilling family for a job well done. And to you Lt. Colonel Shilling, thank you for your service.

Waiving adoption fees allows us to remove barriers and help even more pets find the loving homes they deserve."

Since opening, the St. Mary's Animal Adoption & Resource Center has been protecting, advocating for, and providing Compassionate care to animals in need. The Animal Adoption & Resource Center takes in and oversees adoptions for a variety of animals, including dogs, cats, reptiles, small mammals, birds, and more!

The shelter is open to the public on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Fridays from noon – 6 pm, and on Saturdays and Sundays from noon – 4 pm. Walk-ins are welcome; no appointment necessary!

Residents can learn more about the Center, view animals available for adoption, and watch the live kitty cam online at: www.stmaryscountymd.gov/animalshelter.

The Maryland 3,000 challenge was first launched more than a decade ago and continues to grow in participation and impact. In 2024, Maryland shelters collectively surpassed the goal with 3,119 adoptions. This year, with even more shelters participating, the goal is to exceed that total and place even more animals into loving homes. FINANCIAL FOCUS®

Does the 4% rule make sense for your retirement?

You may have heard of the "4% rule" when it comes to retirement. The idea is simple: After you retire, you withdraw 4% of your investment portfolio each year. In theory, this helps ensure your savings last for your lifetime. While this rule can be a helpful starting point, it's not a one-size-fits-all — and it's definitely not a substitute for a plan tailored to your specific needs, wants and wishes.

The truth is, how much to withdraw in retirement depends on factors like when you retire, if you'll work part time, how long you expect retirement to last, your lifestyle goals, inflation and whether you want to leave a financial legacy to heirs. So, the 4% rule should be viewed as more of a guide than a strict rule.

Let's start with age. The 4% rule is often based on someone retiring at 65 and expecting to live until about 92. But if you retire earlier, you may want your portfolio to stretch further. In that case, you might need to start with a lower withdrawal rate, maybe closer to 3%. And if you retire later, you might safely withdraw a little more — perhaps 4.5% to 5% — depending on your financial situation.

Your retirement lifestyle also plays a big role. Are you planning to travel the world or spend more time at home? If you expect higher spending in the early years of retirement, you may need to adjust your withdrawal rate or plan to reduce spending later to balance things out.

Your financial flexibility matters too. If you have less wiggle room with your expenses, rely heavily on your portfolio for income or want to preserve wealth for your heirs, a more conservative approach might be wise. In this conservative scenario, your portfolio withdrawals may be met from interest and dividends. Think of your withdrawal rate as existing on a spectrum from more conservative to less conservative, with your personal situation determining where you land.

Then there's inflation. A well-built strategy usually includes small annual increases in withdrawals to keep up with rising costs — about 2.75% per year. But you don't need to take a raise just because the calendar says so. If the markets have had a tough year or you don't need the extra income, it might be smart to skip an increase. Being flexible can improve the chances your money will last.

It's also important to understand what's known as your "portfolio reliance rate" — how much of your retirement income comes from your investments versus other sources like Social Security or pensions. The higher this percentage, the more conservative you may want to be with withdrawals.

And don't forget the IRS. If you're drawing from a traditional IRA or 401(k), you'll need to take required minimum distributions (RMDs) once you reach age 73. Your RMD for any year is the account balance as of the end of the prior calendar year divided by a life expectancy factor according to the IRS. These RMDs need to be accounted for in your strategy.

The bottom line? The 4% rule is a useful starting point, but it's just that — a starting point. A good financial advisor can help you build a strategy that reflects your age, your goals and your full financial picture. By revisiting your plan regularly and staying flexible, you'll give yourself the best shot at turning your savings into a secure, fulfilling retirement.

a View From The BLEACHERS

Leverage

By Ronald N. Guy Contributing Writer

Canton, Ohio, August 2008: It was a predictably hot summer evening at the NFL's birthplace. As thousands of humans milled about, an ambient buzz echoed around a massive stadium and the adjacent shrine to American football. Stories were told. Memories were shared. Snapped photos memorialized the experience. A scan of the jovial crowd revealed handshakes, hugs and smiles. By date of birth, there were many adults in attendance, but make no mistake about it, everyone there felt like a kid.

Six men would be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame on that night. There was no dress code, but NFL attire was clearly the unwritten rule. Many teams and players were represented in the chosen wardrobes, but the dominant color scheme was Burgundy and Gold and the most prominent jersey numbers were 81 and 28.

Rare is the opportunity for fans to witness the Hall of Fame induction of a franchise great. But two on the same night? Nearly unprecedented. Recognizing the special moment, 'Skins nation commandeered Canton on that long-ago night with one objective in mind: celebrate Art Monk and Darrell Green as they joined football's most exclusive fraternity.

A horrific sight greeted me at the stadium gate: a Kelly Green Philadelphia Eagles jersey. As if the hue wasn't offensive enough, it was a Monk, number 81, Eagles jersey. Was this dude sent to taunt me? That would have been par for the course for an Eagles fan. But the jersey wasn't a complete gag; it was an unfortunate historical artifact.

Monk, painful as it is, played his last games with the Eagles. Seeing the jersey reopened an old wound. In 1994, with Monk aging and a new salary cap in place, Washington let its franchise icon sign elsewhere – first with the Jets for a season, then with the Eagles for a final farewell. For whatever reason, be it pride, frugality, stubbornness or host of other short-sighted reasons, it was neither the fairy tale ending the fan base craved nor the one the team and player likely preferred. But life often smirks at our happily ever afters.

Fast forward 30 years and Washington is again at an impasse with a beloved star receiver who is every bit as good off the field – as a teammate and human – as he is on it. Weeks into training camp and on the cusp of the preseason, Terry McLaurin has expressed frustration with his contract situation, made a few token visits to camp to sign autographs and requested a trade. What he has not done is step on the field.

The big unknowns are what McLaurin is seeking in an extension and what the team is offering. Suffice to say, there is a considerable gap. Removing emotion, the situation is complex: McLaurin is very good, but he is not one of the NFL's elite receivers. He's nearly 30 years old, an age when most wide receivers decline. And he is under contract this season for a cool, but admittedly below market value, $19.7 million.

With non-guaranteed contracts, short careers and the physical brutality of the sport, I begrudge no NFL player for fighting for every dime. But assuming Washington is offering a reasonable extension, it's hard to understand McLaurin's strategy. He isn't going to sit out the season. That's only going to result in him forfeiting this year's remaining salary and then seeking a new deal next year at age 31. He'll never make up that lost money. A lengthy holdout isn't a viable option either for all of the same reasons, plus the awkwardness of showing up weeks into the season.

So, what is McLaurin doing? What he thinks is right, I'm sure. But he isn't reading the room. He has some leverage: The team has made win now moves after last season's resurgence. But, as can be the case in any human relationship, his calculus is off. In a staring contesting he'll blink first. The team knows it and I hope McLaurin does too. Otherwise, this will end very badly – i.e. a damaged D.C. legacy and another NFL team's fan with a new McLaurin jersey on his back.

The Tackle Box Fishing Report

By Ken Lamb Contributing Writer

Cool weather surprised us all by breaking the heat wave last Thursday night.

The cooler weather continues this week making for excellent fishing conditions.

Best overall news is the spot run in the Patuxent. The spot are eager to be caught and ready to bite at Green Holly, Sandy Point, the mouth of Town Creek, Point Patience, Kingston Hollow, Hawk's nest, and just about every oyster bar up the river to Benedict. It really doesn't get any better than this.

The bluefish continue to get bigger and feed daily in the mid channel of the bay from the Choptank. Best areas are around the Target Ship where trolled surgical eels are producing for trollers. Lure casters are using spoons, top water plugs, Gotchas, etc. thrown into the middle of the breakers. Big jigs fished near the bottom close to the breaking schools find bigger (some gigantic) bluefish.

Bull Redfish are scattered about, cruising in big schools. The fish are looking to eat baitfish and will come up and break tossing bait and froth into the air. There is no predicting when one may come across them. They seem to like the Mud Leads and the lumps below the Target ship. They will take most any lure when in a feeding frenzy. Big lures work best.

Cobia are still south of us. Windmill Point is very good, but it is a hefty run from Point Lookout.

The striper season is now open in the Mayland waters and is off to a good start. The cooler weather and good tide movement are perfect for stripers, and good catches have been made around structure in the Patuxent.

Speckled trout and red fish are in the lower Potomac and in the bay near the mouth of St. Jerome's creek.

Trout are more numerous than the reds at the moment.

These are perfect summer days. School starts soon. Time's a wasting.

Animal Shelter Waives Adoption Fees through August 31

The Linda L. Kelley Animal Shelter invites residents to adopt during the monthlong Clear the Shelters 2025 adoption event through Sunday, Aug. 31.

During this campaign, the shelter will waive adoption fees for all animals, made possible through a collaborative effort between Friends of the Linda L. Kelley Animal Shelter and the Calvert County Board of County Commissioners

This year's campaign also includes participation in the Maryland 3,000 Adoption Challenge, a statewide initiative aiming to place at least 3,000 animals in homes throughout August. By joining both efforts, the shelter seeks to increase adoptions for shelter animals, raise awareness about pet homelessness and help families find their perfect match.

Now in its 10th year, Clear the Shelters is a nationwide campaign that is spearheaded by NBCUniversal Local, Hill's Pet Nutrition and Greater Good Charities. Since 2015, the initiative has helped more than 800,000 pets find forever homes. The 2022 campaign established a new record, with more than 161,000 adoptions nationwide.

Animals of all ages are available for adoption, including dogs, cats, rabbits, roosters, pigs and more. Adoptions include spay or neuter surgery, microchipping, age-appropriate vaccinations, and a starter care package to help pets transition into their new homes. Standard adoption protocols still apply. All potential adopters will go through the shelter's usual screening process to ensure each animal is placed in a safe, loving and appropriate home.

The shelter is open Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. To schedule an intake appointment, call 410-535-7387. The shelter is located at 5055 Hallowing Point Road in Prince Frederick.

Follow the Linda L. Kelley Animal Shelter on Instagram at @calvertcountyanimalshelter and on Facebook at www.facebook.com/CalvertCountyAnimalShelter.

Arrest Made for Two Armed Robberies

Deputies from the Calvert County Sheriff's Office responded on July 25 to the Verizon Wireless store in Dunkirk for a reported robbery. The suspect, later identified as 35 year-old Jonathan Alexander Gray of Prince Frederick, stole an Apple iPhone 16 Pro Max and left a threatening note on a napkin indicating he had a gun.

Gray then fled the store on foot. On July 27, Gray committed a second robbery at the Dash-In convenience store in Owings. During this incident, he again threatened the store clerk with a gun before fleeing the scene in a small white SUV with stolen cash.

The Calvert County Sheriff's Office Criminal Investigations Bureau quickly connected the two cases and initiated surveillance on Gray. On July 30, investigators conducted a coordinated takedown operation in the Walmart parking lot in Bowie, taking Gray into custody without incident. Gray is currently being held at the Calvert County Detention Center on multiple charges related to both robberies.

Two Additional School Resource Officers Approved

By Dick Myers Staff Writer

The Calvert County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) has approved the addition of two School Resource Officers (SROs) to the elementary schools.

Assistant Sheriff David Payne told the BOCC on Aug. 5, "Currently, there are 14 Calvert County Sheriff's Office deputy sheriffs assigned as School Resource Officers to Calvert County Public Schools. Each School Resource Officer is assigned to a group of elementary, middle and high schools throughout the county to provide adequate coverage.

"School safety remains a high priority and a critical responsibility, creating the need for additional law enforcement presence at each Calvert County school.

"The Calvert County Board of Education/ CCPS currently funds four of the School Resource Officers through reimbursement."

Payne added, "The Calvert County Board of Education/CCPS currently reimburses the Calvert County Government and Calvert County Sheriff's Office for four Deputy Sheriffs serving as School Resource Officers and the remaining 10 deputy sheriffs serving as School Resource Officers are funded through the Calvert County Sheriff's Office.

Staffing each of the schools with a permanent School Resource Officer is a responsible necessity. The Calvert County Sheriff's Office is committed to accomplishing this goal in systematic phases. To this end, the updated Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with the Calvert County Board of Education/CCPS includes two additional School Resource Officers to be hired by the Calvert County Sheriff's Office and reimbursed by the Calvert County Board of Education/CCPS."

Payne noted, "This update will result in the Calvert County Board of Education/CCPS funding six School Resource Officer positions, and the Calvert County Sheriff's Office will fund the remaining 10 School Resource Officer positions, resulting in 16 total School Resource Officers in Calvert County."

The fiscal impact for the current fiscal year is $207,167.03, to include $121,764.00 in salaries, $60,882.00 in benefits (calculated at .55), and $24,521.03 in additional associated deputy costs. New vehicle and vehicle add-on costs are not included at this time, according to Payne.

Sheriff Ricky Cox said, "It's always been my goal for our schools of having the deputies inside them, not to just to secure the school, but mentoring our kids and our children. And, hearing from some of the principals I've talked to, they really enjoy having the deputy there to handle situations. That kind of takes a load off their plate as well."

Getting to know the kids is key, he said. "We just finished a DARE camp that was a weeklong, at Windy Hill, with 50 elementary school age kids. And just prior to that, we had our middle-school age camps.

And it's cool to see the deputies interacting with the kids and mentoring our youth. And I think they're our future, our most important asset in our county. And I think that we should protect our schools and our kids at the same time. So that's why I'm asking for these two additional positions."

The sheriff said, "It's my goal to have a deputy at every school. At this point, we've got our high schools, middle schools, and we have 12 elementary schools that need to be covered, which is a total of 22 schools that are out there in our county. And that'll put us about six short, being our elementary schools."

Cox reminded, "Some of those have double campuses, and we kind of do a dual role at that point."

Commissioner Mike Hart said of SROs, "They're part of the school every day."

Commissioner Catherine Grasso said,

Sheriff Ricky Cox

"It's such a positive impact for our community and for the children. So many children don't have heroes to look up to, and they look up to all of you. And, when you nurture those relationships, it makes it easier for some children who perhaps have something on their mind to know that you all are there."

Hance to Seek Re-election as Commissioner

By Dick Myers Staff Writer

Calvert County At-Large Commissioner Earl "Buddy" Hance has filed for re-election to a third term in next year's election. As of noon on Aug. 6, he was the only one so far to file in the commissioner races.

Hance did recognize that there was some talk that he wouldn't run again. He said, "People would ask me, and I'd always say that depends, because you know, your health, and you just want to make sure everything's good with my health because at my age, and depending on where things are with the county, so whenever somebody would ask, I would always say, I'm going to see. There were some rumors floating around and people started talking and I finally made the decision that I was going to run. I thought, well, I might as well just go ahead, do it'll and squash those rumors. So, that's why I did it when I did it."

Hance, who recently turned 70, said his health checks out fine. "Everything was good."

What's left undone after almost two terms? He said, "Because of all the growth that was going on, and we have done a good job, especially this board of putting some things in place to control the growth a little better. But the last preservation program. that hasn't been available for new farmers to sign up for 10 or 12 years. So, I've been working on a process, trying to get that procedure opened up so we can get more farmers involved in land preservation. Trying to get that wrapped up. And in the last couple of years, Blueprint has put quite a challenge on our budget. So, now that we've got Blueprint behind us, I just want to work on trying to get a stronger financial picture moving forward. And we're going to move into the new building. We made some organizational changes. I just want to follow them through, make sure that government operates as efficiently as it can."

The commissioners recently got a report that the county was stagnating economically. Hance said, "I told him (the consultant) that day that's the situation that we're in. People don't want to see any more growth, because of what it does to the character of the county, and what it does to the roads. So, it's really hard to attract revenue sources without having to raise people's taxes to provide services. So, I'm trying to figure out what that pathway looks like."

Commissioner Buddy Hance

Hance added, "We do have some situations in Calvert County where there are failing septic systems," adding, "We're trying to work forward on how that moves in the future to figure out how to fix systems without adding additional growth, which is a challenge."

The county had hoped to lure a data center to help the economy. He said, "I's still a possibility. We've had a couple of clients interested in coming to the county. The state legislative session put some things into place that have caused some issues that have to be addressed. We're not rushing to do this. "

Hance added, "We believe a couple locations in the county where it would not be impactful to citizens, but it would provide revenue."

Hance has been board president for five years but says he won't seek it again next year. "This my last year as president."

He feels managing growth has been his biggest accomplishment. "That's why I ran."

He observed, "Of course, any future board can come in and reverse anything we've done. But the changes that we made to the adequate public facilities ordinance are going to at least make the growth meet standards that are more amenable to the county."

In addition to Hance, Sheriff Rick Cox and State's Attorney Bob Harvey have filed for reelection as have Senators Michael Jackson and Jack Bailey and Delegates Jeffrie Long, Jr. and Todd Morgan.

Commissioners Revise Ethics Code

Contains Mechanism for Removing a Commissioner

By Dick Myers Staff Writer

The Calvert County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) has unanimously approved an amendment to the county ethics code. The approval came at the Aug. 4 BOCC meeting.

Constituent Services Specialist Emily Shrieves, who also serves as staff to the ethics commission, explained, "Over the past several months, the Calvert County Ethics Commission (CCEC) has come before the Board of County Commissioners in work sessions regarding the implementation of Ch. 370 Laws of Maryland, 2024 (House Bill 834), which requires the CCEC to publicly disclose recommendations to expel a commissioner and authorizes the governing body to remove county elected officials for local and state conflict of interest violations based on the CCEC's public recommendation. On July 15, 2025, at the BOCC meeting, the CCEC conducted a public hearing to receive comments on the proposed ordinance. The BOCC voted to close the record and the CCEC would return no sooner than 10 days for final adoption."

Shrieves explained, "There was one comment received during the public hearing and no comments received electronically or by mail during the advertisement period. Following the public record closing, the CCEC recommends amending Chapter 41 of the Calvert County Code of Ordinances to implement Ch. 370 Laws of Maryland, 2024."

There is no fiscal impact with the approval. The bill was introduced into the Maryland General Assembly by Del. Mark Fischer (RL 27-C) at the suggestion of a small group called Calvert Citizens United (CCU). They led an unsuccessful legal challenge all the way to the Maryland Supreme Court, attempting to override the vote by then commissioner Kelly McConkey in which he participated in voting to include property he owned into the Huntingtown

Town Center.

During the Supreme Court hearing, the judges suggested that CCU seek a legislative remedy, which they did.

Myra Gowens, one of CCU's founders, spoke to the BOCC at their Aug. 4 meeting after the vote.

After praising Shrieves for the job she did throughout the ethics code update process, Gowans said, "I know it's taken almost 16 months to adopt this bill, but you've adopted it, and that's a wonderful thing. And the citizens recognize that, and they recognize that you've been behind them."

Gowans observed "I want to share another item, and I wrote it down because it was from the past president of the Small Business Interest Group (SBIF). And I'm not going to step on that person's grave, but I want to share this with you. It was all over our internet. It was in and out of our county in 2019. This is what he said, and you can look it up: "We formed a coalition with our government, with three commissioners, (hen planning director Mark) Willis, all the people, (Deputy Planning Director) Mary Beth Cook, everybody. We formed a coalition with them four and a half years ago." He said this right before you all adopted the comprehensive plan, when everybody was complaining about the planning commission, the third floor, "We formed a coalition and worked hard and worked with them. And now we're getting criticized."

Gowans said, "I just want you to know that that's nice that they asked everything, the builders, and developers, that they worked hard, that they had everybody backing them except the citizens. And that is the people, the one group they left out."

She added, "I hope that you will stay on track. I hope that you will listen to our citizens, and I hope that you'll respect the fragileness of our county. It's the smallest county in Maryland. It's the sixth smallest county in the whole United States."

Rally Expected Against Removal of Schools' Anti-Racism Policy

Would be Excised from Code of Conduct

By Dick Myers Staff Writer

A rally is expected to be held before the Aug, 7 Calvert County Board of Education meeting to contest the proposed removal of the school system's anti-racism policy from the code of conduct that is distributed to students at the beginning of the school year.

The proposal was brought up in June by School Board President Jana Post and was advanced without discussion.

Debora Harris, president of the Calvert County Branch of the NAACP, will be presenting prepared remarks at the meeting. In an interview with The County Times, she said, "I think it's a concern in a long list of other concerns. The Board of Education, since they've been in office, have been deleting anything with DEI (Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion)."

Harris said. "The first one was to take inclusion and support from the mission statement, which the county government paid over $25,000 to get the strategic plan with the mission statement and got the input of many people in the county. I think it's hundreds of people in the county."

She said, "Just like that, they just took it out and no explanation as to why, no involvement of the community and removed it."

That was followed, she said, by removal of Safe Space stickers from classrooms "because it came from the Joe Biden Foundation, without any explanation. And then the last board meeting they deleted the anti-racism policy, again, with no explanation, no community input."

Harris said, "It seems like it's a political board of education, rather than a board of education that's designed to support children learning. We have a good school system and the things that they're doing are moving the school system back rather than forward into excellence."

Harris is retired educator, with 30 years' experience as a teacher and administrator in Calvert and then at the State Board of Education.

Harris said the school system often gets complaints about racist incidents from students and staff, including incidents of being called the 'N' word.

But she said about the anti-racism policy, "There was a framework, there was some sort of structure where staff and students all were on the same level. To put the anti-racism statement away, it doesn't leave anything for them for what happens, what's the process."

Harris is on the county-commissioner-appointed School Safety and Wellbeing Advisory Committee. "One of the things that we've seen in some of the surveys that we looked at is that kids, and really Black kids in particular, feel that there are different consequences for them. They don't see that their punishment is equal. And so, the anti-racism policy does give you some sort of a framework that everyone can work from."

Is the school board's intent a fast-moving train that can't be stopped, she was asked. "As you'll see on Thursday, a lot people of all races in the county are quite upset about the Board of Education. It's a nonpartisan, elected board. They have made this board to be a very partisan, very Republican, very political board. And that upsets us greatly because politics is not going to get us a great school system, where we have been for many years."

Maybe it's their newness, she observed. "I don't see that they even understand. Maybe they don't even understand the role that they have as elected board members and giving support for all students, making this a great school system. I don't think they understand how to go about it. I think they just know what is political."

In her two minutes of time to speak to the school board she's going to emphasize the accomplishments she's seen in the school system.

"This has always been a school system where our goal was to meet the needs of all children. I see that this being a step back. That's our greatest concern. The anti-racism policy is a concern, with other things that they've been doing since they've been there. There's no transparency in what they're doing. There's no community input or explanation."

Another retired educator, Dr. Mike Shissler, is the NAACP's education representative. The long-time Beach Elementary School principal and losing candidate in last year's school board election, said his interview with The County Times represented his personal views and not that of the organization. He said Harris would be delivering their official position on Aug. 7.

Shissler said the board actions could have been anticipated. "I've just heard rumors that one of the messages from the Republican Party in Calvert County is that they wanted to get rid of Dr. Townsel (former superintendent).

Shissler noted that a speaker at the school board meeting from the Repunlican Central Committee said that elections have consequences, and Shissler believes what he was saying is that an all-white school board is one of those consequences. "I think he basically said those were things that he was glad about, turning back the clock to what this county really was."

Shissler said, "I've learned that I'm never going to really understand what a Black person goes through in our society, let alone our county, let alone in our schools. It's my question to the board...what are you afraid of? Why are you threatened by taking out terms like white supremacy? Why do you think that's dismissive? And I think if you spend any time reading about American history, it's certainly become more available in the last decade. Or that there are things that happened and things that we've done, not just to Blacks, but the Native Americans to Hispanics, that we probably should feel some guilt over. And if we didn't, then I would question, what is your sense of morality?"

He added, "I'm not trying to go out there and judge people, but I think they need to learn what history has been and need to learn how life looks from other people's perspectives."

Shissler observed, "I think this is coming from beyond five people sitting up on the board. They're delivering messages (for) the Republican Party."

Shissler said, "I think we need to work for the presumption that we can do something, that it's not a done deal. And that we could point out why we believe these steps are wrong."

Debora Harris, president of the Calvert County

The Aug. 7 rally in front of the school system's administrative offices on Dares Beach Road is expected to begin at 4 p.m. ahead of the school board's 5 p.m. executive session. The regular meeting begins at 6:30 p.m.
